

Ep. 390 | How to Trust God's Timing When the Promise Feels Delayed

What do you do when you've prayed, waited, believed—and nothing seems to change? In seasons of delay, disappointment, and silence, it can be tempting to lose heart or take matters into your own hands. But God is still at work, even in the waiting. In this episode, Christine Caine unpacks Luke 1:1-25 and the story of Zechariah and Elizabeth and reveal how faith, hope, and trust are formed in the space between God's promise and its fulfillment. This message will encourage you to keep believing that even when God seems silent, He is not absent—His timing is always purposeful. You'll be reminded that your waiting is not wasted, your prayers have been heard, and your God still does the impossible.

WHERE IN YOUR LIFE ARE YOU MOST TEMPTED TO GIVE UP BECAUSE GOD'S TIMING FEELS TOO SLOW?

HOW MIGHT GOD BE DEEPENING YOUR FAITH IN THIS CURRENT SEASON OF WAITING?

WHAT WOULD IT LOOK LIKE FOR YOU TO SPEAK FAITH AND HOPE INSTEAD OF DOUBT OVER YOUR SITUATION THIS WEEK?
