

Ep. 391 | The Cost of Calling: What It Really Takes to Follow Jesus

What if the very thing holding you back from your future is what you refuse to let go of? Following Jesus isn't comfortable, convenient, or predictable—but it is always worth it. In a culture that celebrates options, security, and self-promotion, God calls us to something radically different: surrender, faithfulness, and full devotion. In this episode, Christine Caine unpacks 1 Kings 19:1-21 and the powerful moment when Elisha burns his ploughs to follow God's call. Through this message, you'll discover why calling is not something you chase—but something you prepare for through faithfulness right where you are. This episode will challenge you to let go of what's familiar so you can step into what God has prepared, reminding you that a life fully surrendered to Jesus is always worth the cost.
